5. The set text of the oath shall not be amended and changed. Non-compliance with this provision, refusal to swear an oath or to sign a nominal oath sheet, or signing the sheet with a stipulation shall mean that the Prime Minister or a minister has not sworn the oath and may not hold his office.

6. Nominal oath sheets shall be handed over to the Seimas Chairman and shall be kept in the Office of the Seimas.

Chapter three RETURN OF THE POWERS OF THE GOVERNMENT AND ITS RESIGNATION

Chapter three RETURN OF THE POWERS OF THE GOVERNMENT AND ITS RESIGNATION

Article 8. Return of the Powers of the Government

Article 8. Return of the Powers of the Government

1. The Government shall return its powers after election of the President of the Republic.
2. After the Seimas elections the Government shall return its powers to the President of the Republic on the day the newly-elected Seimas convenes its first sitting.
3. After the presidential elections the Government shall return its powers to the President of the Republic on the day he assumes his official duties.
4. When more than half of the ministers are changed, the Seimas must newly empower the Government.
5. The powers of the Government shall be considered to have been returned when the Prime Minister or a member of the Government deputising for the Prime Minister hands in a written application to the President of the Republic.
6. The President of the Republic shall accept the powers returned by the Government and charge it to perform its duties until the Government is newly empowered by the Seimas or until a new Government is formed. If the Government does not return its powers in writing, the President of the Republic shall have the right to charge by a decree the Government to perform its duties and to appoint a member of the Government to deputise for the Prime Minister until a new Government is formed or until the Government is newly empowered by the Seimas.
7. When the Government returns the powers on the grounds specified in paragraph 1 of this Article, the President of the Republic shall within 15 days submit to the Seimas for consideration the candidature of the Prime Minister of the Government which has returned its powers. When the Seimas approves of the candidature of the Prime Minister and the President of the Republic appoints the Prime Minister, if not more than half of the ministers who worked before the return of the powers have changed in the Government the composition whereof was submitted by the Prime Minister and approved by the President of the Republic, the Government shall be newly empowered to act in accordance with the programme previously approved by the Seimas. If the Seimas does not approve of the candidature of the Prime Minister, the Government must resign.

Article 9. Resignation of the Government

Article 9. Resignation of the Government

The Government must resign in the following cases:

- 1) when the Seimas disapproves two times in succession of the programme of the newly formed Government;
- 2) when the majority of all the Members of the Seimas by secret ballot pass a motion of no confidence in the Government or in the Prime Minister;
- 3) when the Prime Minister resigns or dies;
- 4) after the Seimas elections, when a new Government is formed;
- 5) when more than half of the ministers are replaced or after the election of President of the Republic the Seimas does not confer powers on the Government anew.

2. After announcing a written notification about the resignation of the Government at a Government sitting, the Prime Minister shall submit it to the President of the Republic.

3. If the Prime Minister dies, the President of the Republic shall be notified of the resignation of the Government by a minister deputising for the Prime Minister; in the event there is no deputising minister by the eldest minister. A notification of the resignation of the Government must be announced at a Government sitting.

4. If necessary an extraordinary sitting of the Government shall be convened for the announcement of a notification of the resignation of the Government.

5. The President of the Republic must be notified of the resignation of the Government on the day when one of the circumstances referred to in paragraph 1 of this Article occurs.

6. The Government may resign upon the proposal of the Prime Minister by adopting a regulation which the Prime Minister shall submit to the President of the Republic on the same day.

7. The President of the Republic shall accept resignation of the Government. The Government shall be considered to have resigned from the day of the entry into force of the decree of the President of the Republic. When necessary the President of the Republic shall charge it to continue performing its duties. He may charge one of the ministers to act for the Prime Minister until a new Government is formed.

Article 10. Appointment, Dismissal and Resignation of a Minister

Article 10. Appointment, Dismissal and Resignation of a Minister

1. On the nomination by the Prime Minister the President of the Republic shall appoint and dismiss individual ministers. When deputising for the President of the Republic the Seimas Chairman may not appoint or dismiss ministers without the Seimas consent.

2. The minister shall have the right to resign. The minister shall notify the Prime Minister in writing of his resignation. The Prime Minister shall within 5 working days present such resignation of the minister to the President of the Republic. Until the presentation of the resignation to the President of the Republic, the minister shall, on the proposal of the Prime Minister, have the right to revoke his resignation.

3. The minister must resign when more than half of all the Seimas members express, voting in secret ballot, a lack of confidence in him. The minister shall notify the Prime Minister of this fact in writing on the same or the next day, and the Prime Minister shall present the resignation of the minister to the President of the Republic on the same day or if this is not possible – not later than on the next day. If the minister does not fulfil this requirement, he shall be relieved of his post by a decree of the President of the Republic.

4. The President of the Republic shall accept the resignation of the minister. The minister shall be considered to have resigned from the day of the entry into force of the decree of the President of the Republic. The President of the Republic may charge the minister to continue in office until a new minister is appointed on the nomination of the Prime Minister.

Article 11. Submitting an Interpellation to the Prime Minister or a Minister or Submitting a Draft Regulation concerning Non-Confidence in the Government

Article 11. Submitting an Interpellation to the Prime Minister or a Minister or Submitting a Draft Regulation concerning Non-Confidence in the Government

1. During a session of the Seimas, a group of at least 1/5 of the Seimas members may submit an interpellation to the Prime Minister or a minister, as well as, submit a draft regulation concerning non-confidence in the Government.
2. Upon considering the reply of the Prime Minister or the minister to the interpellation, or the reply of the Government to the draft regulation concerning non-confidence, the Seimas may decide that the reply is not satisfactory and by a majority vote of more than half of all the Seimas members express non-confidence in the Prime Minister or the minister, or the Government; said voting shall be done by secret ballot.
3. Upon the declaration of non-confidence in the Prime Minister or the minister, or the Government, they must resign on the same day.
4. When the Seimas declares non-confidence in the Prime Minister, the Government shall resign in corpore. In this case, the President of the Republic shall charge another Government member to carry out the functions of the Prime Minister until a new Government is formed. When the Seimas declares non-confidence in a minister, the President of the Republic shall charge another minister to carry out the said functions until a new minister is appointed and sworn in. In this case, the Prime Minister shall not later than within 15 days present to the President of the Republic a new candidate for minister.
